SUPPLEMENT TO REPORT NO.

Last March<sup>1</sup> the Central and South China Military Area Command organized an artillery training corps to teach Soviet techniques and materiel.<sup>2</sup> As of 27 April 1951 the corps was engaged in a six-month course on Chia-lung<sup>3</sup> guns, bazookas and Chia-chiu-sa<sup>4</sup> rocket launchers. The training is under the supervision of Kao-erh-ko-fu (高尔科夫) (? Garkov) and Lieh-ang-chu-no-fu (列昂朱諾夫) (? Ryazhunov) from the Soviet artillery advisory group.

25X1C

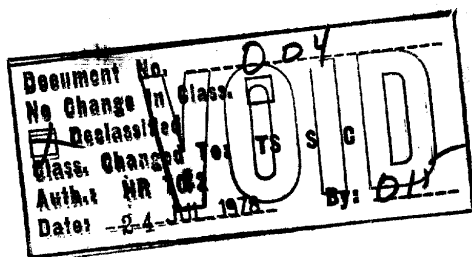

1. [REDACTED] Comment. It is not clear whether this refers to 1950 or 1951.

2. [REDACTED] Comment. Presumably the handling of Soviet equipment.

3. Comment. Translator stated that the characters were the same as those for General Galen.

Comment. Check of all available information reveals no Chia-lung or Galen gun. Although no characters were received, since translator is a Hunanese (who frequently reverse n and l) it is believed that possibly this is in error for Chia-nung (加農), a common Chinese term for cannon (i.e., long-barreled gun).

4. [REDACTED] Comment. Probably Katyusha.
